

ABOUT THE STATE

Happenings of Interest from Different Sections.

Attorneys Leonard F. Wing and George E. Morse, recently in service, have formed a partnership and opened offices in Rutland.

On account of the large number of guests at the Brandon inn, it has been necessary to open the annex, which had been closed since last fall.

Final returns from the tag day of the Brattleboro high school showed that $11.13 was collected for the benefit of the athletic department of the school.

Madame Hawkes, mother of Mrs. Leon Bell of Johnson, recently fell from a flight of stairs and fractured her skull, besides injuring her back. She is 79 years old and blind, and it is feared she will not recover.

The Ministers' club of Burlington gave Rev. G. W. Davenport of St. Paul's church a farewell luncheon and reception Monday. Mr. Davenport goes soon to New York City, where he is to become associated with the Seamen's church work.

The St. Johnsbury band has already begun rehearsing for the summer concert and it is expected it will be considerably augmented by young musicians and some who are returning from overseas service, while practically all the members of last year's organization are still present.

One cow which left a drove that was passing through the streets of Brattleboro a few days ago knocked down three-year-old Marguerite Cooley, who was walking with her mother on the sidewalk, the cow charging Mrs. Cooley, but striking the child instead. The cow was bruised and badly shaken up and had to be taken home.

Miss Rose D. Straw, who died in Stowe Sunday, had been connected with the Stowe free library for many years as assistant to her sister, Mrs. Mary A. Jenney, and as chief librarian since Mrs. Jenney's death three years ago. She would have been 77 years old in March. She leaves 20 great-nephews and great-nieces and several great-grand-nieces and nephews.

As Mr. and Mrs. Hurdie Smith and two children of Newfane were on their way to West Brattleboro for a visit last week, Mr. Smith was leading a young colt and the rope was between him and Mrs. Smith and the children. The colt suddenly started toward the side of the wagon and in doing so pulled Mr. Smith and two children over the dashboard into the road.

Capt. and Mrs. G. C. Marshall and daughters have returned to Rutland after being in Panama some time, where Captain Marshall was superintendent of one of the largest government hospitals ever erected. He entered the medical department of the army in the fall of 1917, was assigned to duty in the canal zone and in November of that year the family left for Panama.

Gladys Sullivan, five-year-old daughter of Mrs. Nellie Sullivan of Burlington, was badly burned about the face and head and both arms Monday while she was in the cellar of her home with another child, playing Santa Claus. The Sullivan girl had on a mask with flowing whiskers and carried a candle, which ignited the beard and caused severe burns before anyone came to the rescue.

Frank French of Hydeville, who was poisoned by eating biscuits made with a mixture of arsenic of lead in them a few months ago, is able to walk a little with crutches. He was in the Mary Fletcher hospital at Burlington for a number of weeks. It was there that he commenced to mend. He has been moved to Poppleton, where a doctor can see him every day.

The M. B. Batchelder block in Ludlow was partially destroyed by fire Sunday morning. The cause is unknown. The fire was first discovered under the second floor. The hose companies were notified and responded very quickly and had the blaze under control in about an hour. The exact amount of the damage is not known, but the roof of the building was partly burned off and the building probably was damaged to the extent of $3,000.

Edward L. Welcome, a farmer, who lives near Brattleboro, is in the Memorial hospital with a compound fracture of a bone in his foot, caused by a peculiar accident. He chopped off one of two trees which were growing from one stump but the branches were intertwined so it did not fall. He tried to twist the tree with a cant hook when the butt suddenly dropped down on his foot, holding him fast. It was then necessary for him to twist the tree with the cant hook so it would fall before his foot was released.

A 10-year-old boy from the town of Florida, a mountain settler near Adams, Mass., who was sent to Adams to deliver three bushels of potatoes last Thursday morning, lost his way and appeared in Pownal late Friday afternoon, with a horse and carriage and the potatoes. A Pownal merchant, questioning the boy, who spoke a foreign tongue, learned that he came from near Adams and communication with the police of that place took place. The boy had driven all day Thursday, all night Thursday night and until late Friday afternoon, without food for himself or horse, but at Pownal the merchant and his wife took the boy in and gave both him and the horse proper care for the night, the boy's father coming for him Saturday.

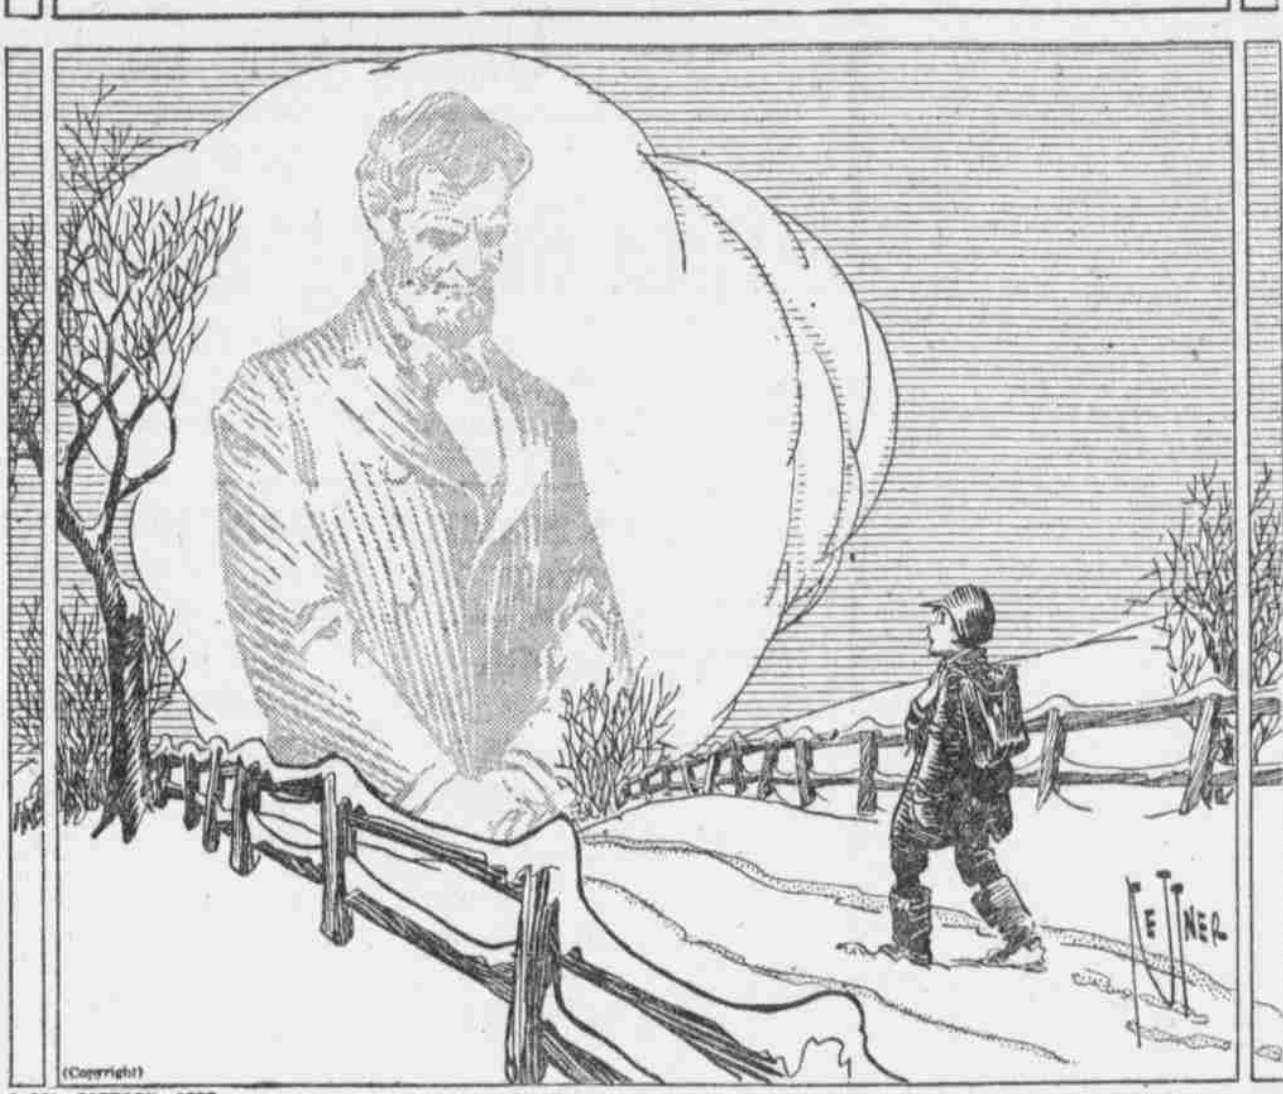

MAY PENSION TEACHER.

Rutland Will Give Rose Carrigan $300 a Year if Voters Acquiesce.

Rutland, Feb. 12.—In recognition of Miss Rose C. Carrigan's long and faithful service as a teacher in the Rutland public schools the board of commissioners voted at the meeting held this week to insert in the warning for the March election an article asking the voters to grant the board the authority to give Miss Carrigan a pension of $300 a year. For 34 years she has taught in the Rutland schools and for over 20 years Miss Carrigan has been the principal of the building in which she has been located. She is herself a graduate of the high school and since that time, 1889, she has taught continuously until she was taken ill about two years ago.

The pension can be legally granted as there is a statute which provides that any district may take such a step after a teacher has served the community for 30 years.

The Americanization Problem.

General Crowder's analysis of the draft statistics includes some significant figures concerning the alien population of the United States. Of the total registration, 3,877,083 men, or 16.22 per cent were classified as aliens. All the men included were within the ages when activity is greatest. Their problem is peculiarly the nation's problem. If they are Americanized the 3,877,000 people of this country who were born abroad or under alien environment will be a radically changed element in American life. For happily it may be assumed that the public school will continue, with increasing efficiency, to care for the needs of the children.

The problem of Americanization, little regarded a generation ago, but brought home to everyone by the conditions disclosed when America entered the war, is just now receiving constructive attention to a most encouraging degree. Secretary Lane's proposal of a program of federal co-operation with the states has met with generally favorable response from the governors, many of whom considered phases of the problem in their inaugural addresses. Some of the states, notably New York, are going at the matter through competent commissions. The most elaborate plan is that of the Carnegie corporation, which proposes an extensive survey of the situation taking several months at least. There is much reassuring evidence also that the intricacy of the problem is pretty generally appreciated and that it is being followed up along broad but very definite lines.

Illiteracy is an obvious evil that must be met. It is said that under the 1917 draft alone 700,000 men—men within the most active ages—registered by marking "X" for their names. By no means all were of foreign birth, but those who were not were in a sense "in the same boat." As many as possible must be taught to read and write the English language. This means teachers, and trained teachers, which means an energetic policy by local and state as well as end public spirit. There is no disagreement as to this necessity, and little excuse, unless public indifference be regarded as an excuse, for longer neglecting it.

But reading and writing are only part of the answer. Some of the most dangerous element in the social body are superficially the best educated. Teaching of civics, of American history and government, of the rights and duties of citizenship, are necessary, too. Industrial training has gained a sure foothold in the American educational system; its opportunities need to be extended to the newcomer. The methods developed for special instruction to meet the needs of the alien could be adapted to the broader requirements of peace.

It is highly desirable also, as Governor Coolidge has pointed out, that the prospective American should be met on his own ground; that he should be taught Americanism in terms which he understands. His point of view must be known. What he brings which should help America, as well as what he brings that may be harmful to it, needs to be studied. In essentials the newcomer must conform; in nonessentials he may and should contribute to the enrichment of American life by contribution from the genius of other peoples. The Carnegie foundation's definition is a good one:

"Americanization is the uniting of new with native-born Americans in fuller common understanding and appreciation, to secure the highest welfare of all. Such Americanization should perpetuate no unchangeable political, domestic and economic regime delivered once for all to the fathers, but a growing and broadening national life."

The architect who said that "the solution of the housing problem is three-quarters of Americanization," touched upon a basic consideration. The immigrant's economic opportunity should be safeguarded, or created where it doesn't exist; he should be protected from the grafting parasite of many varieties who prey upon his ignorance. The laws should operate equally affecting him. It will be slow work making him a 100 per cent American, if American justice, whether publicly or privately administered, is permitted to discriminate against him.

Those who deliberately prefer to remain alien, not excepting some who become citizens, would probably in most cases be better off against any policy of Americanization. Failure to reach them should not be a cause of discouragement. The great mass of the foreign-born are potentially good citizens. Firm faith that this is so must lie at the root of every effort to help their development.—Springfield Republican.

Married Men, Read This.

A translator of the Bible into the New Guinea tongue wanted a proper idiom for the phrase, "Far be it from me to do this thing." He consulted a learned native, who replied, "I understand. We have the precise idiom; we say, 'May I speak to my mother-in-law before I will do this thing.'"

That sounded rather like a joke to the translator, but it wasn't, for in that land of strange taboos, one of the unpardonable sins is for a man to open his lips to his wife's mother.—Boston Transcript.
